The Sixth Vacation in Perpetuity Endowment Founded

Can you think of a better way to keep eternally green the memory of some one you loved and who loved children?

Can you think of a cheaper or betcan you think of a cheaper or better way to make sure that you have made it possible for a child to get two weeks of happiness every summer as long as you live—and for a long, long time after that?

Of course, you can found five or ten or twenty such endowments if you wish or twenty such endowments if you wish.

In considering this idea don't forget that the fund needs $90,000 for this summer's current expenses, if it is to give 13,000 boys and girls the vacations they need.

Two hundred and fifty boys out of that 13,000 begin their vacations today. If you can be in the Grand Central Terminal this morning about 8:30, come see them set out for the Shepherd Knapp Farm at Litchfield, Conn. You'll believe they need vacations if you see them. And you'll know they think they are going to get good ones if you watch them and listen to them as they go on their way.

Approximately 1,100 vacations are scheduled to begin next week. It is probable that this number will be increased before the week ends. For the week followed there are parties scheduled for various places which should total more than 1,000. And there is no question that other parties will be scheduled for this week.

At present there are only five days remainer in Approximent in Approximent of the week and it is the parties of the parties of the parties will be scheduled for this week.

In memory of Lucretia K. Baldwin, a lady who loved little children, the sixth vacations in perpetuity endowment was founded yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. William K. Baldwin, of Washington, D. C. This meerial to the mother of Mr. Baldwin will mean a vacation each year forever for one of The Tribune Fresh Air Fund's little proteges.

Do you know about these endowments which add to the world's permanent store of happiness, reader of The Tribune? Two hundred dollars will establish one. The income from that sum invested in Liberty bonds or other absolutely safe securities will meet each year the expense of a fortnight Fresh Air vacation for a boy or a girl of the New York tenements. To found such an endowment you may send either securities or cash to the fund.

Yale Increases Tuition Fee From $240 to $300

NEW HAVEN, July 23 .- Tuition in the undergraduate departments of Yale University will be increased from $240 to $300 with to-day. The corporation at a recent meeting sanctioned the increase, and provision is made whereby a student now in college who may feel obliged to do so may ask that the increase be omitted.

The increase is attributed to the higher costs of maintaining the university. In April, 1919, the tuition fee was increased from $160 to $240.

"With deep sorrow I have to announce the death on July 22, 1920, of 20.00 William K. Vanderbilt, at the age of 7 00 seventy years.

"In 1877 he became vice-president, and for nearly fifty years he had faithfully served our companies as a 7.00 Airctor. With clear vision, keen intelligence, sound judgment and absolute integrity, he had guided the development, extension and consolidation of the New York Central lines. ability and foresight, but to the universal recognition of his sense of the right thing to do.

"That sense of right regarded not only a particular corporation of which he was a director, but the interests of the state and the nation as well. In all matters affecting the interests and well being of the officers and employees of our company, justice and fairness guided his actions. We mourn his loss, we reverence his memory; not only because he was one of the great factors in the development of one of the greatest transportation systems in the world, and because he was one of the greatest transportation systems in the world, and because he was one of the greatest transportation but because he had always been our true and loyal friend."

PARIS, July 23.—The death of William K. Vanderbilt caused a deep impression in France, where almost more than any other American he was honored and respected by Frenchmen as one of themselves. Among many articles in the press paying 'ribute to the American sportsman was the 'Figaro,' which says:

"In respect and sadness we bow before the remains of this good man, who was almost as much of a Frenchman as an American. His own modesty and his desire to pass unnoticed bids us adopt restraint in our praises of him. PARIS, July 23. The death of Will-his desire to pass unnoticed bids us adopt restraint in our praises of him. During the war he acted as a real Frenchman at heart, sparing neither himself seconded by a wife of the noblest sentiments—nor sparing his great fortune in the creation of hospitals and other humanitarian works. About that, at least, we had to speak. In Paris society he was a figure with cashet of his own and quite American. He was cool, inscrutable, but always correct, with the great and small.

"I have been him with crowned heads. He raised his hat with a deference hardly as marked as before humbler men. 'A man's a man' was his favorite motto, as it is among his compatriots. During the war he used to say, smilingly, that he had only a quarter of his income; America and France took the rest."
